Patricia Hennings and the Peninsula Women’s Chorus

Take Up the Song

Building a Community of Heart and Soul and Voice

A book of inspiration for choir directors, singers, composers, and friends of the PWC

The purpose of this book is to inspire. Whether you are a choral conductor, a composer, or a singer in a choir, we hope that these materials will reveal possibilities you had not considered before. It includes essays by composers and excerpts of their pieces, with information about how you can obtain copies; there is even a CD of full performances of many of the pieces. There is also a lot of practical information about what it takes to run a chorus, as well as commentary about the spiritual side of drawing a group of singers together into a choir.

Although the materials draw heavily on the experiences of the Peninsula Women’s Chorus under the direction of Dr. Patricia Hennings, this is not a book about them. We hope it is a book about you, as you take up the song.

Excerpts from the book

I wanted to create an unmistakable musical metaphor that suggested all the meanings of the word “mountain”: God, the challenge of accepting life in the face of death, the decision to confront great spiritual challenges, or simply accepting life as a mortal opportunity to love . . .

— Libby Larsen on “Psalm 121”

Every composer needs a Patty Hennings—a great conductor who believes in our music; who performs not only our shorter pieces, but the more challenging extended works; who infuses her chorus with her love and understanding of these works; who sends this spirit across the footlights to her audience; who does this not only for premieres, but repeats the works in following seasons.

— Kirke Mechem

Reviewer’s praise for Take Up the Song

Although I heard the PWC at the ACDA national conventions and collected a few of the recordings, I did not know Patricia Hennings. Take Up the Song: Building a Community of Heart and Soul and Voice makes me wish I had. . . . [This book] receives my highest recommendation, and everyone will benefit from owning it.
